REPUBLICAN STATE LEAGUE MEETING.

To the Republican Clubs of West Virginia.
The annual meeting of the Republican State League Clubs of West Virginia will be held in the city of Charleston, on Wednesday, March E. 1886, for the Merch of the Committee of the Commi

At the late meeting of the Republican state committee the following was adopted:

"Resolved, That this committee request the Republican editors of West Virginia the Republican editors of the Republican State Club League, for the purpose of organizing an association to forward the interests of the Republican party in the coming campaign." WILLIAM M. O. DAWSON,
Chairman. Kingwood, W. Va., Feb. 29, 1896

The Campaign Against McKinley. A dispatch from Jacksonville, Florid shows one sort of missionary work that is going on in the south and reveals something of the general plan of cam paign sgainst McKinley. The dispatch appears in the Philadelphia Press among other newspapers. Unless the Press had reason to believe the story to be true it would not open its columns

It appears that Mr. Frank Willing Leach, of Philadelphia, one of Senator Quay's lieutenants, is in the south pressing hard for anti-McKinley deleates. In Jacksonville he sought a conference with two McKinley men and tried to argue them out of their support the Ohio man. He assured them that McKinley cannot be nominated. The point of this assurance is that it is a capital blunder to support a man who fails of nomination, for this involves all pains and penalties of "getting left." Fortunately men are not broken on the wheel for this offense.

"But," suggested one of the Florida en, "the Republican masses are for cKinley." Mr. Willing Leach was parry that thrust. He admitted that the Republican masses are for McKinley, but what has that to do with 117 "If the people controlled conven-tions," Mr. Leach replied, "McKinley uld be nominated, but the people do not control." Then Mr. Leach went on to say that "Quay, Platt and the other plotticians who run conventions are against McKinley and they are arranging matters so that his nomination will

When did these politicians run a Re publican national convention? Not to go very far back, they tried to prevent the nomination of Harrison, and the Republican masses ran over them. Asked how the politicians s were going to make sure of McKin-ley's defeat, Mr. Leach replied that the "favorite son" scheme would do it, in "already the politicians have votes tied up to prevent the nomination of McKinley." not say who is to be the beneficiary of the combine, but he will be a man satis-factory to the leaders, "and he will not on the men who nominated advised those who want something from the next administration to break away from McKinley.

This story is easy to believe because it outlines the well understood policy of the men who have tried to run Republinational conventions and failed. Mr. Leach was frank about it as far as he went, for that suited the purpose of mission. If he could make ambitious men believe that in following Mc-Kinley they would have their trouble for their pains and cause the white house door to be slammed in their faces. he would have gained a great deal. Mr. Leach seems to have falled to make the desired impression.

The splid foundation and steady growth of the McKinley sentiment make it very doubtful whether the combine can compass the defeat of the Ohio man. It is still more doubtful whether, in the event of McKinley's defeat in the convention, the combine can name the nominee. The Republican masses understand all that is going on, and they a determined purpose to control national convention themselves. The fine work of the professional politicians is stimulating the Republican party to its best endeavors.

Senator Quay's friends are doing talented prognosticating in his f. They forsee his nomination for reasons that would not at once occur to anybody less gifted. Assuming that their combine can defeat McKinley, they say that the elements which compose it will have to go to Quay, because Quay will be unable to use his support for anybody else. The more this thought over the more captivating will become to others aspirants in the combine. It is a remarkable case of weakness giving strength.

The President and Cuba

The Associated Press dispatch pur-porting to give the views of the President on the Cuban question could hardly have been more official in character if the President's name had been signed Undoubtedly the statement was furnished from the white house

The President regrets the action of Congress. He thinks the time has not come for such action. He will do nothing at present in the matter. After the Cubans shall have held out longer, say a few months, and shown that Spain and that butcher's clever Weyler can-not subdue them, then the President voice the sentiment of his country and accord the Cubans belligerent

The resolutions of Congress recognize that a state of public war exists in Cuba. Is not this a fact known of all men? Since it is a fact why does the President hesitate to declare it? It is aslo a fact that the programme out-lined by Weyler is an outrage on decency, humanity and civilization.

And this is to be allowed to go on without protest within gunsho of a country which knows what it is to struggle for liberty and which boasts of its civilization. When Cuba shall have advanced as far as the President de-mands that she shall advance before we recognize her belligerency, she will have reached a point where she will be indifferent to our recognition. If the President knows the situation in Cuba as well as his countrymen know it, he knows that recognition is due now. He will discover that the country does not take kindly to the inpostponement of this act of common justice. The people of Cuba know how the people of the United States feel towards them. There is some consolation in that. Aid for Disabled Firemen.

The movement for the relief of Wheeling's disabled firemen is a good one. No men in our public service dis-charge their duties more zealously or more fearlessly than our firemen. No part of the city's service shows better

There is not a resident of Wheeling perty have as good protection against as capable, daring men under a fearless and expert commander give. When one of these men is dis-abled the blow falls heavily on him. His fellow citizens should be glad to join in a movement to make provision for the rainy day that may come at any time to one of these faithful public General Harrison is in great luck. He wins a big law suit and a big fee and is about to wed the woman of his choice. It is hard to beat such a combination.

The Italian reverse in Abyssinia grows more serious with the later ad-It appears that the government is pursuing the policy of breaking the news gently by degrees so as to avert as far as possible the infuriated resentnent of the people. In these days even a monarchy is not indifferent to public The truth about the disaster seems to be that the Italians were outgeneraled as well as outnumbered. Base ball or no base ball, this is the question that agitates the "fans" here-

A hundred of the active men of Cleveland's Chamber of Commerce are at work to raise that body's membership to 1,500. Wheeling's Chamber of Commerce can have 300 if the men interested in the city's welfare will take hold. The Chamber of Commerce can be made the city's most potent agency for good. Push along the good work.

A year hence a brand new President will be in the white house and he will be ready to sign a protective tariff bill. It is pretty well understood what his name will be.

CHURCH HALLS

In Connection with the State University An Important Problem Solved. To the Editor of the Intelligencer,

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

SIR:— I desire to call the attention of your thoughtful and educated readers to a great work which can be done by the various churches of West Virginia—a work which lies at their hand ready to be done. I mean the practical, common-sense idea of taking advantage of the great opportunities offered by the state at the state university. The Protestant Episcopal church through its wise and far-sighted head in West, Virginia, has already made an important step in this direction. Let me quote what, Bishop Peterkin says in his annual report on the diocese of West Virginia:

an important step in this direction. Let me quote what, Bishop Peterkin says in his annual report on the diocese of West Virginia:

"In fulfillment of a plan which has been in contemplation for several years, a church hall has been established in connection with the state unversity at Morgantown. This idea of 'church halls' or dormitories at state universities has of late created unusual interest because of a number of magazine articles and addresses by Prof. Richard T. Ely. Ph. D., and other earnest advocates of the plan.

"The idea has its origin in a condition of things which may be stated thus; All the states—except a few of the older ones in the east already provided otherwise—have established state universities, which are munificently equipped for the highest training in every department of educational life. Many people, however, object to these universities on account of the fact that they do not or cannot exercise a care over the students in their home life.

universities on account of the fact that they do not or cannot exercise a care over the students in their home life, and because of what is supposed to be an insufficient moral or religious influence. This is due to the absence of dormitories, and of ability on the part of the state to provide a religious influence which would entirely saffsty each denomination.

"There are two ways of getting rid of this objection: (1) By building separate church colleges; (2) By building separate church colleges; (2) By building church dormitories, called 'church halls,' for the accommodation of students at the state universities.

"Tu build a separate church college, with an equipment equal to that of the state university, is impossible for the church in any state; and, even if it were possible, it might not be wise, for experience has shown that students ordinarily prefer the more general institution, where extraordinary privileges are offered them free of charge. It is here that the church hall comes in to relieve the church of the burden of building and endowing a large university for a few students, and to supplement whatever may be lacking in either a home or religious way in the state institution. The church hall can provide all that the separate college could. It supplies the home, with its dormitory, under the care of a church elergyman, or other fit person, and it may, if dekired, have its separate chapel services or family prayers, its special studies of a religious or voluntary character, and, in addition to all these, everything that the great university can give in either an intellectual or social way. It keeps the student under the influence of the church, and it does it without depriving him of the inestimable advantages provided for him by the state. In fact, it seems an easy and sensible, solution of the difficuit question as to the proper relations of the church and state in the field of higher education. It makes the one uphold and supplement the efforts of the other."

It seems to me that the bishop's arg

here this afternoon, was the acoption of a ringing resolution indorsing Ohio's candidate.

There was no mistaking the sentiment of the delegates.

The convention was the largest and most representative gathering of the Republican party since 1572. Seventy-three of the seventy-five counties were represented.

Colonel W. C. Whipple, of this city, presided. Powell Clayton, H. L. Romail, Henry M. Cooper and M. W. Gibb were elected delegates-at-large to the Republican national convention.

The resolutions instruct the delegates-at-large and the congressional district delegates to vote for McKinley for President; congratulates the Republicans of Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri on their ability to wrest their states from the grasp of Bourbon Democracy; favors binetallism with such restrictions as will secure the maintenance of the parity of values of the two metals so that the purchasing and debt-paying power of the dollar, whether gold or paper, shall be all time equal, indorsing the action of Congress in declaring that a condition of public war exists in Cuba and condemns the action of the Pemocratic party in Congress in placing lumber on the free list.

Use it in Time.

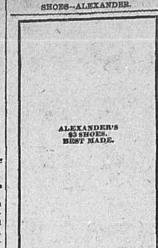

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, cars and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucus, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forchead and about the eyes, a roarring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very oftensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.
